Oh, when I first started working at the factory I was told that I needed some tools and one would be, oh dear, what do you call these things that level? A spirit level. That I would need a bubble for a spirit level and that I would have to the stores and get one, when I went there I was told that they didn't have them and I was passed on to somebody else and this went on a couple of times and I realised that I – that the men were just having me on. It was just a trick so and then another time they told me to get a left-handed spanner and I realised what they were doing and I just never had any of it but I got through the job fine.
