I can remember in school we had a film shown once and they showed us a newsreel. It was probably with something else, like a Mickey Mouse thing but then there was a newsreel came on. And I sat crying my eyes out cos it – there were all these bombings and houses blowing up. Then we saw a film called the Pied Piper which is about a man rescuing children from Europe and gradually collecting them up and brining them back to England and all the things that happened to him on the way. I was sobbing my eyes out cos I kept thinking, oh, my mum and dad were in there are they gonna get blown up, you know. So I did – I did obviously have times when I was sad. But most of the time cos you're, you know, you're busy doing stuff and you're able to go out. We had friends and we played, I think you just got on with it.
