

Transcript of Audio Clip with John Leverett

My sister and my mother and I were evacuated to a village called Lytchett Matravers in Wiltshire, funny little village. It was a thatched cottage we were billeted in, had an outside loo which never flushed [laughs] which wasn't very nice at all. It was all oil lamps and oil cooking it was no mains, water or electricity or gas and we had to walk down the road, in the centre of the road was a well where one had to draw the water up from, get the water, but we were only there very, very short time, there was nothing happening so we came back to Glengore Road again.